During all day Saturday | which exhibit any vindictive feeling toward she pounded heavily, and the sea washed ver her at every wave. She will undoubtedly go to pieces. She is partially insured

Several vessels put out during Friday night and Saturday but were obliged to recan which they did with difficulty.

On Saturday evening, the propeller Gov lushman, when entering the harbor, ran in to the Industry, knocking a big hele in the side of the schooner. The Cushman then ran on to the piles, knocking a hole in her and modern times. Also the London Illusside and doing some damage to her stern. She got off and went up the river to ner dock. She will be shortly repaired.

The sch. Rapid, of Buffalo, in coming i aturday, ran into the Industry and got foul f her rigging. Two of her men jumped on board the industry to clear her away, when he sheered off, leaving them on the Industry. They were in a dangerous position, the es breaking over the schooner every minute. The tug Bemis ran alongside, and with some difficulty got them off. The Rapid was not asterially injured. About 11 o'clock Saturday night the sch. . H. Drake from Buffalo, light, attempted o enter the harbor. Missing it, she atruck pon the west pier, broached to, swung and and sunk directly across the channel. After striking on the West pier, her jib boom caught in the iron Bencon light. The eavy sea tossed her up and down and the boom battered the Beacon so severely that it shortly came crashing down and was dashed into a thousand pieces. A more complete wreck cannot be imagined than the Beacon resented yesterday.

The Beacon has long been considered un afe. In the annual report for 1859 of Lieut. Col. J. D. Graham, of the Topographical Engineers, to the Secretary of War, that officer says of Cleveland :

"Since my report of 1858, the dilapidation of the piers has increased much, and the longer the necessary repairs are delayed, the more costly they must ultimately be.—
The extremity of the east pier is the base upon which the iron beacon light rests. This beacon is in danger of falling from the condition of this base. The whole pier, however, requires immediate repairs in order to prerequires immediate repairs in order to prerve the harbor."

The Beacon was built in 1851 to supply the place of the old one which was burned. t was wholly of iron, three stories high, with a brilliant Fresnel light, flashing once in two minutes. All that now remains is a mass of broken fragments, the destruction having been complete.

The J. H. Drake was built about six years ago by Quayle & Martin for the Winslows. She is now owned by the Northern Transportation Company, and insured in the Comsercial Mutual or the Northwestern Co. She sank a few rods inside the entrance to the harbor, directly across the channel, layng a complete embargo on the port. The tugs Cleveland, Peter Smith and Bemis were all at work at her yesterday forenoon, endeavoring to pull the how up stream, but without effect. She lost her topmast in the still more widely circulated. Charlin, we are sorry to say good-bye, but we know you wont forget Cleveland, and you wont be above your old friends. He says he did strike her once, three weeks ago, when she greatly provoked him, but that the wound spoken of she got by falling. On Thursday lasta woman went to the going to the house again. His wife wanted ago home with the woman and take her hild with her; he said she could go if she eft the child at home, which she was not willing to do. On Friday afternoon when he went home from the bakery she was gone and he found no trace of her except a dress which was in the stove and partly burned. He thereby inferred that she had another deranged attack.

The woman at first refused to see her hus and, saying that she was afraid he would strike her, but they finally talked together and apparently settled matters amicably.

The letter which was found when she was taken from the canal, was found to be a long onsensical composition, which she said was "charm" against all dangers. She is at present staying at the house of D. dell, Hill street, and will probably be re-

We give some instances: The boiler which exploded was the lar ard one. It was torn completely to pieces raised from its bed and thrown aft, nothin of its shape remaining but the front portion or firebox. The starboard boiler was bent and crushed in as if it were a paper box, by the force of the concussion. On the main dack were forty cords of wood which were thrown confusedly into the air with the frag-ments, and lie heaped on the dock, having carried away the roof of the dock in their descent. The smoke stack and engines were lown into the river. The canal boat Alonzo had her stern broken in. A very large fragment of timber was thrown across the river, and left its mark on the river front of the Board of Trade building. Another fragment passed into the Board of Trade room, and struck one of the flour tables; a second fragment traversed the djoining reading room and buried itself in Very heavy pieces of timber and iron fell South Water street. The most remarkable of all was the flight of one of the fenders, as the round, stout timbers are called, which hang alongside, to protect a steamer's sides. This stick of oak, weighing from two to three flundred pounds, descended like an arrow, piercing the iron shutter of a window in the rear of the fourth story of Messrs. Larabec & North, on Lake street near Wells, cutting a hole through the iron, and then swinging ound and demolishing the brick wall be-ween the windows. On the north side of the river a large piece of coal descended through the roof of Wright's Hotel, on the corner of North Water and Wells streets.

A very narrow escape was that of two of the bed after their night's service, a large piece of the "hog-chain," about five feet long de-scended through the roof and ceiling, and actually passed between them as they lay in bed, injuring that arm of one of them, Mr.
